

LOST PROPERTY

Curated by Dr Lucy Gundry

07 NOV - 26 APR

Scattered throughout this building are items of 'lost property' which have been left by members of the public on trains and stations throughout the Southwest of England. They were found, logged and held onto for three months by the GWR Lost Property office in Bristol Temple Meads station waiting to be 'claimed' by their owners through MissingX.com. However, these belongings were never claimed, so for now they are biding time posing as 'found objects' in this exhibition before being taken to charity shops, recycling centres or landfill.

This exhibition forms part of encloded practiced based research exploring the sense of belonging in how we experience, communicate, collect, archive and exhibit our wearing relationships. The viewer is invited to reflect on what it means to have, hold and lose items of clothing and whether clothes belong to us or we belong to clothes?

If you have a 'lost property' story, please message Lucy.
